

Christian Doctrine

Angels (Conclusion)

Final Thoughts on Angels

Here are a few thoughts as we wrap up our study on angels:

- Angels remain busy even today. They continue to praise, worship and serve God. They help and protect believers, often without us even knowing it. They also await the future where they will fulfill their role in the events prophesied in the book of Revelation.
- The interest in angels as a means to provide good-luck or guidance is an error. We must not embrace this, as such an interest will take our focus off of God.
- We must not ignore the reality of angels, but we ought not to give them our primary focus, either. Our focus and trust is to be directed toward God alone. Just as angels have their focus on God, they desire us to have our focus on God as well.

Final Thoughts on Demons

Here are some final thoughts pertaining to demons:

- We must recognize the reality of demons and be on guard against their activities. Scriptures gives us specific steps that we must take seriously in order have victory in the area of spiritual warfare.
- We do not need to be preoccupied with demons, as this would indicate that we are not focusing on Christ. If we allow demons to get our focus off of Christ, then we are giving them exactly what they want.
- We do not need to fear demons for any reason. “Greater is He that is in you than he that is in the world” (I Jn. 4:4). God is more powerful than both Satan and his demons. They cannot do anything that He does not allow. God is always in control, and we can have peace in this truth.

May the truth of God’s Word concerning angels be a constant reminder of the many things God is doing behind the scenes in the spiritual world. May we find in these truths a continual sense of peace and comfort!