Mankind (Part 1)

How Did We Get Here?

God's Creation

God makes it clear in His Word that mankind was a direct creation from God Himself. Genesis chapters one and two reveal how mankind was created on the sixth day of creation. Adam was formed of the dust of the ground (Gen. 2:7) and Eve was made from one of Adam's ribs (Gen. 2:21-23). This was the beginning of the human race.

Points about Creation

Note the following significant points concerning creation:

- God created everything out of nothing. The Latin phrase “ex nihilo” (meaning “out of nothing”) is often used to refer to creation (Heb. 11:3). Therefore, before creation nothing other than God Himself existed (Gen. 1:1; John 1:3; Ps. 90:2).
- Mankind was created “male and female” (Gen. 1:27; Matt. 19:4). We did not evolve over time.
- When God looked at His creation, including mankind, He saw it as being “very good” (Gen. 1:31).
- The Genesis account of creation was not intended to be taken as a myth. Other passages confirm it as a real historical event (Ex. 20:9-11; Matt. 19:4-6).
- Since there are some gaps in the biblical genealogical records, we cannot know for certain when the creation week occurred. Some biblical scholars estimate it could have been as little as 6,000-10,000 years ago, while others believe evidence points to an older creation.

Our Intelligent Designer

Many scientists, even those who are not Christians, recognize that the world gives strong proof of “intelligent design.” As believers, we recognize that all of this intelligent design comes from our Designer, the Almighty God. We are not here on earth by accident, nor did we come into existence by chance. Rather, we were brought into existence by the very work of God Himself (Jer. 1:5).
