

Ephesians 6:1-4

Honoring God in the Home

- > What command is given to young people in verse 1? To obey their parents, for this is right.
- > Which Old Testament command, used to support verse 1, is quoted in verse 2? Honor your father and mother.
- > What blessing is given to those who obey this command (v. 3)? Things will go well and you will live long on the earth.
- > What is the goal of parenting (v. 4 – directed at fathers in particular)? To raise kids in the training and instruction of the Lord.

Application

- > From an understanding of God's plan for families, list reasons why young people are given the command to obey their parents: Parents have the responsibility to train their children so children must submit to that; there is a lot children can learn from their parents; children must obey out of obedience to God, etc.
- > Why can this command sometimes be difficult for young people to follow through on? Parents may be seen as being too strict; young people may feel that parents don't relate to or understand them; young people may simply just not like the rules, etc.
- > Do the answers from your previous question ever give young people the right not to obey? Explain? No (unless parents are encouraging sinful behavior), God has reasons for His commands.

Does the issue of obedience ever feel like a continual battle within your home? No parent may be perfect, but young people must understand that their parent is not out to get them! Parents have an important obligation before God to raise their children by His standards, just as children have an important obligation as well - to obey! Staying focused on your responsibility is the key to honoring God in the home.
